THE STAGE EFFECT

A Powerful Mini Guide to Using Public Speaking to Market Your Business

- ✓ Keynote Speaking
- ✓ World Class Training
- ✓ Public Appearance

INTRODUCTION

American Billionaire Warren Buffet once said public speaking as a skill is so important that it would raise your professional value by at least 50%.

By learning how to use The Stage Effect, you can immediately and massively increase your level of influence, your client base, and your proffits.

Winston Churchill, Tony Robbins, Martin Luther King Jr., Bill Clinton, Abraham Lincoln, T. Harv Eker and many others have used the principles behind The Stage Effect to entertain, educate and influence millions of people.

People are drawn to, want to follow, spend time with, and do business with great speakers. Use this guide to learn how to create and use The Stage Effect to market yourself or your business and create massive attraction for yourself, your product, or your service.

©Copyright 2020 | Speaker Nation | www.SpeakerNation.com

WHAT IS THE STAGE EFFECT

The Stage Effect is perhaps the most powerful form of influence on earth. It is the strange and powerful attraction that is created whenever a person presents information to an audience in an entertaining and engaging manner.

Have you ever noticed that the more people there are paying attention to a speaker, the more you want to know what it is the speaker is saying? Think about it. If you are at an event and there are two different speakers at the same time, one with a few people scattered around the audience but it's far from full, and the other speaker with the theatre completely packed, which speaker would you be more interested to see?

If you're like most people, you probably answered the speaker with the bigger audience. That's The Stage Effect at work.

Big Audience + Great Delivery = MASSIVE ATTRACTION

The size of the audience and the quality of the delivery determine the level of attraction created by The Stage Effect.

By learning how to use The Stage Effect, you can immediately and massively increase your market exposure, customer attraction, client retention and profitability.

Winston Churchill, Tony Robbins, Martin Luther King Jr., Bill Clinton, Abraham Lincoln, T. Harv Eker and many others have used The Stage Effect to entertain, educate and influence millions of people around the world.

People are drawn to, want to follow, spend time with, and do business with great speakers. Use this guide to learn how to create and use The Stage Effect to market yourself or your business and create massive attraction for your product or service.

©Copyright 2020 | Speaker Nation | www.SpeakerNation.com

CREATING THE STAGE EFFECT

One of the most powerful keys to establishing a strong Stage Effect is to create a solid balance between confidence and humility.

Confidence + Humility = ATTRACTION

For many people this is challenging because they have an intense fear of public speaking. It is difficult to look confident when all you can think about is how badly you want to rush off the stage. But it is important not to act overconfident either. Speakers who come across as arrogant are not often well received. Being confident yet remaining humble will help you establish a strong connection with your audience and create a powerful attraction.

The next step in creating a powerful Stage Effect is great delivery. You can have the biggest audience and the highest attraction, but without a powerful delivery that engages your audience and is memorable, you will not stand out.

©Copyright 2020 | Speaker Nation | www.SpeakerNation.com

FOLLOW US ON SOCIAL MEDIA

www.facebook.com/SpeakerNation www.instagram.com/speaker.nation www.linkedin.com/company/speaker-nation

HERE ARE 5 POWERFUL KEYS TO GREAT DELIVERY IN YOUR PUBLIC SPEAKING:

I. KNOW YOUR OUTCOME.

Having a very clear sense of purpose about your presentation is one of the most powerful ways to develop and display a sense of confidence during your presentation.

Many speakers think about their talks in a very tactical way: What am I going to present? What is the immediate outcome I am trying to achieve?

The Stage Effect comes into play when a speaker understands that every presentation has a variety of strategic outcomes beyond the immediate delivery of content, including:

- To learn about the audience.
- To establish rapport with the audience.
- To demonstrate credibility.
- To create a feeling of authority.
- To exceed expectations.
- To impress the promoter/producer.

When a speaker arrives at an event with a clear set of Strategic Outcomes, and a plan for achieving them, their confidence shines through.

Many speakers agree: the clearer your outcomes, the fewer nerves and butterflies you will have. Knowing your outcomes and how you plan to achieve them shows up in your body language and it sends a powerful signal to the audience, the producer and to yourself.

©Copyright 2020 | Speaker Nation | www.SpeakerNation.com

II. BE PREPARED

What will you need to make the most of your presentation? Preparing your presentation is only part of the challenge; what else do you need to make the presentation go perfectly?

Will you use slides? Do you need a flip chart? What kind of markers do you want? Is there enough paper on the flip chart? Do you need any other props? Do you like to have water on stage? Fizzy or still?...

Long before your presentation you should be in communication with the production team to make sure that all your stage requirements are handled long before your talk begins. Nothing ruins your Stage Effect like realizing you don't have everything you need for your presentation in the middle of your talk. Resolving these issues last minute can be stressful, both for you and for the team.

ON THE DAY OF YOUR TALK:

- Arrive early.
- Meet with the production team.
- Make sure that your slide show works on their system.
- Do a sound check.
- Check the stage.
- Make yourself comfortable with the environment.
- Make sure that everything is ready.

©Copyright 2020 | Speaker Nation | www.SpeakerNation.com

III. PRACTICE, PRACTICE AND THEN PRACTICE SOME MORE

Know your content. But don't just know it—really KNOW it. There is a significant difference between knowing what you plan to say verses knowing how you plan to say it.

Have you ever noticed that stories seem to get easier to tell each time you repeat them? Every time you practice your talk—especially in front of a live audience—your talk will get better. You will find more effective ways to say things, your timing will improve, your jokes will get funnier, you will remember more details, and you will get more relaxed.

In professional sports, practice is key. Michael Jordan, after being cut from his high school basketball team, became a practice fanatic. Wayne Gretzky's parents would have to call him off the ice for dinner because he just kept practicing. And, as Tony Robbins says, "Repetition is the mother of skill."

Once you know the content of your talk, you should practice it. Practice it in front of the mirror, practice it in the car, practice in the shower, and most importantly practice in front of people at every chance you can get. The more you practice, the better your talk will become and the stronger The Stage Effect you will create.

Another reason for really knowing and practicing your content is that you will probably get last-minute invitations to speak; if you know your content and your stories really well, you are always prepared to take the stage and deliver a world-class presentation!

©Copyright 2020 | Speaker Nation | www.SpeakerNation.com

IV. EMOTIONS ARE THE GLUE THAT MAKE MEMORIES STICK

Great speakers take their audiences on emotional roller-coaster rides. Emotions are what make experiences memorable. Whether you are speaking to sell, motivate, inspire, educate or persuade, emotions will keep your audience engaged and will make you and your presentation memorable.

Tone of voice is a powerful tool to create emotion in your audience. How do you feel listening to a monotone voice verses when you listen to an expressive voice?

To create a stronger emotional engagement in your audience, use a variety of voice tones and volumes. When you are speaking about something serious, use a strong even tone. When you are talking about something exciting, sound excited. Tone of voice often tells an audience even more about you and your talk than the actual words you are using.

Varying the cadence or rhythm of your presentation is another important way to keep your audience engaged and create emotion.

Speakers are often afraid of silence; they don't like to pause. And yet, a well-timed and well-held pause can add great suspense and create an emotional peak for your audience. Give your message a chance to sink in. Give the audience a moment to catch up. Pause after a good joke; give them time to laugh. Varying the pace of your presentation and using powerful pauses will make your talk more memorable and interesting.

©Copyright 2020 | Speaker Nation | www.SpeakerNation.com

The most effective and the most important way to create emotion for your audience is to tell stories. Stories have the power to create experiences in the audience's mind—they can teach, they can inspire, they can sell.

From nursery rhymes to commercials, stories are used to change the way people think. An entertaining, educational and emotionally engaging story will help you build a powerful sense of attraction, credibility, authority and influence. It will help you create a powerful Stage Effect.

©Copyright 2020 | Speaker Nation | www.SpeakerNation.com

V. USE YOUR BODY

Just as tone of voice can communicate more to the audience than words alone, your physiology—the way you use your body—sends clear messages to the audience as well.

Imagine a speaker standing on stage. Their mouth is moving and words are coming out but they are just standing there, motionless. No facial expressions. No movement of their arms or body. They are just standing there and talking.

Unless the message is especially powerful, such a speaker will lose the audience's attention in minutes. One of the most powerful ways to add energy to your talk and amplify your message is to use your body; move around the stage, use facial expressions and use expressive gestures.

Think about the greatest comedians and storytellers of our time. People like Jim Carrey and Robin Williams. They are beloved by millions thanks to their expressiveness. As a speaker you can leverage this powerful tool to win over the hearts of your audience as well.

TRY THIS: Next time you give a presentation, imagine you are talking to a room full of 8-year-olds. That's not to say that you should talk down to them, or dumb down your content. But deliver with the energy and enthusiasm you would use while reading a storybook to children. You will be amazed how much the audience will enjoy it!

©Copyright 2020 | Speaker Nation | www.SpeakerNation.com

FOLLOW US ON SOCIAL MEDIA

www.facebook.com/SpeakerNation www.instagram.com/speaker.nation www.linkedin.com/company/speaker-nation

POWERFUL NEXT STEPS

If you focus on simply improving your delivery all the time, you will rapidly start to create a powerful Stage Effect. But if you want to be a world-class speaker, you have to think like a world-class speaker. The best speakers in the world look at their speaking like a high-performance sport. They train like elite athletes so that they can perform like elite athletes. Athletes get advice from coaches and trainers to help accelerate their progress; you as a speaker should be doing the same. Invest in your training, because ultimately you are the product you are selling.

There are a variety of speaker training programs available around the world and many of them are fantastic. Before choosing a program, get clear about your outcome. Your primary goals should be considered to make sure you choose the training program that is right for you.

Consider which of the following goals are most important to you:

- Learning to give a great toast at formal occasions.
- Learning to give great keynote presentations.
- Becoming a great trainer or educator.
- Becoming a great brand ambassador or promoter.
- Learning how to sell products or services from the stage.
- Using speaking to develop your personal brand.
- Getting paid as a professional speaker.
- Getting free travel as a professional speaker.

©Copyright 2020 | Speaker Nation | www.SpeakerNation.com

Once you get clear on your outcomes, you can make a better decision about the kind of training you should get.

Also, here are some important questions to ask before selecting a trainer:

- How many years has the trainer been speaking professionally?
- How successful are they now as a speaker; separate from their training?
- How much international exposure have they had?
- Are they frequently speaking at high-profile events?
- Do they appear to be living a fulfilling lifestyle?
- Have they done a variety of different kinds of speaking?
- Do they have a solid online presence and large following?
- How intimate are their training programs?
- Do they offer a money-back guarantee?
- How much training have they undertaken themselves?

Before investing your time and money make sure you have selected well!

The point of all this is simple: The Stage Effect is the most powerful thing you can master as a speaker. Learn your content, practice your delivery, and deliver with enthusiasm. Do this in front of a big audience and you will create magnetic attraction on a scale you never thought possible.

Want to know exactly how you can master The Stage Effect quickly?

Take a look at our online video training series called Successful Speaking Strategies. This in-depth video training is based on more than a decade of international public speaking experience and covers all you need to know to start using this powerful skill to your advantage each and every day.

CLICK HERE TO DISCOVER THE ONLINE VIDEO TRAINING

©Copyright 2020 | Speaker Nation | www.SpeakerNation.com

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Eric Edmeades

Speaker Nation founder Eric Edmeades was once so terrified of public speaking he could hardly eat for days before giving a talk.

After systematically overcoming his fear of public speaking, Eric has become an internationally recognized keynote speaker, author, and serial entrepreneur. Beyond sharing the stage with thought leaders such as Tony Robbins, Sir Richard Branson and former President Bill Clinton, Eric has devoted himself to creating wildly transformational programs.

Eric has spent over a decade honing his specialized speaking craft. He learned that public speaking is one of the most powerful tools to creating a truly remarkable life and he wants to pass on his knowledge to you so you can use it for yourself.

His live public speaking courses consistently sell out and over the years he has helped thousands of people find their authentic voice and be confident to take the microphone anytime, anywhere.
He truly is driven by making transformations happen in his clients and this drive has helped him become one of those rare individuals who's not only the master of his craft, but also a master at teaching it to others.

When it comes to teaching people the ins and outs of public speaking, we can confidently say, very few people are more qualified than Eric Edmeades.

LEARN PUBLIC SPEAKING FROM ERIC

To help you on your journey to becoming a world-class speaker, Eric turned the most foundational principles he learned in his 10+ years of experience into one easy-to-learn online program called Successful Speaking Strategies. If you're a coach, consultant, business owner or service provider, we invite you to click the button below and discover how this online video training could help you make a bigger impact through the power of your voice.

CLICK HERE TO DISCOVER THE ONLINE VIDEO TRAINING

Take this opportunity! Eric is not only a world class speaker, he also that rare gift of being able to train and share what he is doing, in a highly engaging and energising way.

Ian Webster

©Copyright 2020 | Speaker Nation | www.SpeakerNation.com

FOLLOW US ON SOCIAL MEDIA

www.facebook.com/SpeakerNation www.instagram.com/speaker.nation www.linkedin.com/company/speaker-nation